THE RIGHT TRACTOR FOR THE PARTICULAR JOB

THE proverbial Jack-of-all-trades was master of none. The modern world of science and technology paid him by the same principle applies to farm tractors. The tractor that does a wide variety of jobs unsatisfactorily can't possibly produce the greatest results at the least cost in any job.

But that's what the farmer—particularly the small operator—has got to do to meet postwar competition: he's got to produce the most food possible with the least effort and, consequently, at the lowest cost.

The farmer with 10 acres in truck crops needs one kind of tractor. The farmer with 100 acres in wheat alone needs another kind—or, as is usually the case, two or more different tractors. The tractor which does a good job on the Great Plains may be useless in the rice territory. And so it goes. Conditions of climate, the lay of the land, and the character of soils in the different parts of this vast country, together with wide variations in the nature of crops and the size of operations, combine to produce wide differences in the requirements for tractors. Harvester's policy is to meet all these requirements.

That is why Harvester's postwar line includes a great variety of Farmalls and other specialized tractors and attachments rather than a single tractor with a single system of tools. Every tractor in the line was developed after scientific research and testing under actual operating conditions showed the specifications needed for efficiency and economy.

Every Harvester-built tractor is the right machine for its particular job.

TAKE IT EASY

Has it ever been good sense to buy anything sight unseen?

People are asking us to take advance orders on radios, refrigerators, washing machines and other such major household items although we do not yet have the new models to show.

But even if some of you are willing to buy a pig in a poke, we are extremely reluctant to sell that kind of porker. Millner's formerly had, and will soon have again, large stocks of these items, including many famous makes. And to the radios, refrigerators and washing machines you can add the many other comforts and pleasures American ingenuity has devised for the home.

We urge you to wait until you can see them. That is the most honest service we can give you. Certainly part of our value to you is that we are experienced and skillful in seeing to it that what we offer you is sound and desirable merchandise. We can't do it from pictures or by reading specifications or by listening to descriptions. And if we can't do it, can you?

Certainly, we do not say that you can not, with confidence, place an order for... say... a radio, made by a firm whose good reputation is known. But if you will wait until you can see that model and other models put out by other good firms, you'll be a lot surer of lasting satisfaction.

Don't misunderstand us. It is our business to sell goods. If you want to place orders with us, sight unseen, we will take them. But we don't think that's the way satisfied customers are made. You've waited four years for these things. Take your time now. One thing we can promise... the time you'll have to wait won't be long.
